

HEY MARY, IT'S TIME FOR SOME WORK!

Doctors say
Mary needs work on her gobbler neck
and eyelids

HEY, Mary, you can still turn the world on with your smile, but experts say the rest of your face needs a little work.

Mary Tyler Moore, now 68, admits she had one face-lift, but reports say she's had more - and experts say she definitely needs another one.

"Her gorgeous smile is what's causing the crow's feet and laugh lines to deepen," Dr. Dennis Hurwitz, clinical professor of plastic surgery at the University of Pittsburgh, tells GLOBE.

Hurwitz, who has not examined the actress, tells us that Moore appears to have had a face-lift, lip-lift and brow-lift, evidenced by an incision line at the hairline and a horizontal line under her nose. The effects seem to have deteriorated but a few simple procedures could enhance her natural beauty.

"A little judicious Botox around her eyes could soften the wrinkles at the corners," he says. "And to fill out the nasolabial lines around her lips, a filler called Restylane will do the trick."

Florida facial cosmetic surgeon Dr. Roger Bassin agrees.

"She could certainly use some collagen or Restylane to plump up the wrinkles around her lips," Bassin tells GLOBE.

And New York cosmetic surgeon Dr. Bruce Nadler tells GLOBE, "She could use a face-lift. That incision line is ugly and can be covered up with hair plugs. She's got that turkey-gobbler neck that needs to be tightened up, and her upper eyelids are wrinkled and droopy and need to be redone.

"I'd also have her skin rejuvenated by either dermabrasion or laser to give it a fresher look."
